Wedding Rings.

Cotton dresses are to be seen in numbers t seems to be the fashion to trim them with black lace, arranged as a narrow flounce at the hem in front, caught up in festions, the sleeves covered with black line, also the front of the bodies. In good truth, these would seem to be the two points in which the smartness of a green centres, and black and white guipure, and many cabochous, are employed upon them, and used also on the inevitable frill round the waist. There is less change in wedding rings than in anything else in the lewelry line. The wedding ring is about the same to-day as it was a century ago. The marriage token can hardly be improved upon. It is a ring of pure Maude—Well, mamma, how do you like it? on a joce of string and strike it gently it will ring out an indescribably soft and sweet sound. Ladtes often wear numerous rings Mamma-Humpat The face is good enough: sound. Wife-I'm terribly afraid of that band of gypsies that came into the neighborhood yes Husband-Well, if any of them call here today get rid of them the best way you can.
Whe—But suppose they won't go?
Husband—ch, well; if the worst comes to the worst just invite them in and give them some of that angel-cake.
